

BC FIRST NATIONS JUSTICE COUNCIL

The BC first Nations Justice Council operates 10 Indigenous Justice Centres (IJC) throughout British Columbia. Providing free legal representation to self-identifying Indigenous people (including those who are not Canadian citizens) facing criminal charges or whose families are involved with the Ministry and Child and Family Development.

In addition, IJCs provide wrap-around services to assist clients in applying for or replacing a status card or other identification, completing housing applications, accessing counselling, making cultural connections and more.

If you or someone you are supporting needs the assistance of an Indigenous Justice Centre lawyer, please call the appropriate number below:
