27. Vancouver Aboriginal Transformative Justice Services	The Vancouver Aboriginal Transformative Justice Services Program provides prevention, diversion and alternative measures to Aboriginal people in the City of Vancouver. The main objectives of the Program are to offer a restorative justice process which focuses on repairing relationships among those affected by crime - the victim, the offender, their families, and the community - and to empower individuals to formulate appropriate responses and strategies to deal with the crime and participate directly in processes that affect the overall well-being of the community. To accomplish these objectives, the Society utilizes a community council forum made up of volunteers, an Elder, the victim and offender and their support people to discuss the offence, its effects, and the causes of the behaviour that led to the offence. At the conclusion of the forum, a healing plan is developed with the goal of making amends and positively reintegrating the offender into the community.
